

BCDS provides training that makes a definable and profound difference in the ability to successfully navigate and complete missions in the field. Driving conditions are different overseas. BCDS provide training that makes all the difference.

We could say more, but we thought you should hear it from the front lines. Here is an e-mail recently received in our corporate offices:

Gentlemen,

Just wanted to let you know that we are putting the skills we learned from you to use on a daily basis over here.

On our very first movement out, we came across a bridge that was out. While the guys we were with were looking for an alternate route, our entire team was looking at the terrain and checking all the vehicles for winches. In the end, we backtracked a couple hundred meters, dropped down a bank, across a river, through some soft sand and mud, before crossing back over the river and up about a 50-55 degree slope on the other side of the bridge.

The Hummers all made it up, but we had to winch the Rangers and some locals who followed in their POV's. James would have been proud to hear [REDACTED] yelling at an Afghani to "STEP ON THE LINE!"

The roads are rough and at times very narrow. I cannot stress enough how invaluable your training was and how often we have put it use in the 30+ days we've been here.

Thanks,

[REDACTED]
